Connecting Transferable Skills

The most important mission toward achieving your career goals is knowing how to sell your potential by demonstrating the transferable skills you have developed.

- Skills, interests, personality, and values play an important role in a career choice.
- Take an inventory of jobs, hobbies, training, unpaid experiences/activities, and special interests.
- Determine the skills needed in the jobs/industries of interest.
- Attach tangible examples of the transferable skills you have developed.
- View transferable skills as equally important as direct experience.

Remember employers are seeking candidates with experience and potential.*
